*“When Science Meets
Literature: a Lecture
by Award Winning
Italian Writer*

Paolo Giordano

With a PhD in theoretical physics, Paolo Giordano is the youngest winner of the Strega Prize in Italy. His debut novel, The Solitude of Numbers, is a concept to explain the existential plight of its protagonists, who, like prime numbers, are destined for isolation. Translated into over thirty languages, The Solitude of Numbers will be shown this year at the 67 Venice Film Festival.

Giordano will talk about the physics of human relationships as translated into narrative form.

1:30-2:20 pm, McLevin Building, Room D107
