

Lansdowne Lecture

The University of Victoria's Public Lecture Series features the words and work of distinguished men and women, across a vast array of academic and research endeavours. As host of this lecture series, UVic continues its mission of enriching the human mind and heart.

Abstract:
 A critical analysis of the 'B' in 'Black' and 'White' in the context of the 1990s. This lecture will explore the historical and contemporary implications of racialization in British Columbia, with a focus on the experiences of Indigenous peoples and the role of the state in the construction of racial identity.

Wednesday, 29 January, 2:30 p.m.
 Clearihue Building, Room A316

Dr. Francine Saillant, RSC

Dr. Francine Saillant is a Professor in the Department of Anthropology and the Centre for Indigenous Studies at the University of Victoria. She is also a member of the Faculty of Education. Her research interests include the history of race and class in British Columbia, the role of the state in the construction of racial identity, and the experiences of Indigenous peoples.

Abstract:
 This lecture will explore the historical and contemporary implications of racialization in British Columbia, with a focus on the experiences of Indigenous peoples and the role of the state in the construction of racial identity.

Monday, 27 January, 11:30 a.m.
 Cornett Building, Room B135

Abstract: This lecture will explore the historical and contemporary implications of racialization in British Columbia, with a focus on the experiences of Indigenous peoples and the role of the state in the construction of racial identity. The lecture will draw on a range of sources, including historical documents, oral histories, and contemporary research. It will also explore the ways in which racialization has shaped the development of British Columbia and the role of the state in the process.

Abstract: This lecture will explore the historical and contemporary implications of racialization in British Columbia, with a focus on the experiences of Indigenous peoples and the role of the state in the construction of racial identity. The lecture will draw on a range of sources, including historical documents, oral histories, and contemporary research. It will also explore the ways in which racialization has shaped the development of British Columbia and the role of the state in the process.

Abstract: This lecture will explore the historical and contemporary implications of racialization in British Columbia, with a focus on the experiences of Indigenous peoples and the role of the state in the construction of racial identity. The lecture will draw on a range of sources, including historical documents, oral histories, and contemporary research. It will also explore the ways in which racialization has shaped the development of British Columbia and the role of the state in the process.