This poem is by Margaret Wheatley from her book Turning to One Another: Simple Conversations to Restore Hope to the Future, 2002. On her website she says, “I have always wanted to be out in the world and curious about its workings. I eagerly studied in many different disciplines, including science, history, literature . . . We all must draw from many different perspectives to both understand and reweave the world.

There is no power greater than a community discovering what it cares about.

Ask: “What’s possible?” not “What’s wrong?” Keep asking.

Notice what you care about.

Assume that many others share your dreams.

Be brave enough to start a conversation that matters.

Talk to people you know.

Talk to people you don’t know.

Talk to people you never talk to.

Be intrigued by the differences you hear.

Expect to be surprised.

Treasure curiosity more than certainty.

Invite in everybody who cares to work on what’s possible.

Acknowledge that everyone is an expert about something.

Know that creative solutions come from new connections.

Remember, you don’t fear people whose story you know.

Real listening always brings people closer together.

Trust that meaningful conversations can change your world.

Rely on human goodness. Stay together.
