

Nick Claxton

Indigenous Advisor, Graduate ILR Program Coordinator, Instructor Indigenous Education, University of Victoria

According to the oral history of the Straits Salish people, the Straits Salish have lived on their territorial homelands back to the time of creation. Central to this existence was a deep connection, relationship and responsibility to the natural world. The relationship, the teachings embedded in the landscape all around the local territory