Tara Martin

CSIRO Land and Water, Brisbane, Australia

Conservation decision science is a new discipline emerging from the need to transform ecological data into practical decisions to guide timely conservation action. Conservation decision science draws on the fields of mathematics, statistics, socio-economics, artificial intelligence, and ecology. In this talk I will showcase how tools