

SHIFT Happens: Decolonizing sense of place and co-learning through grassroots pedagogy

Students from GEOG 407 – Activism and Community Based Planning

Wendy Parks, Geography and Indigenous Studies student

Lindsay Kathrens & Megan Sociedade, Geography and Environmental Studies students

SHIFT Happens Collective (SHIFT - Spatial Healing Initiatives and Formative Transformation) is a project for direct action within our community. Our focus has been on creating a grassroots approach to placesense, that is centered on a decolonial praxis and community engagement. Our intentions are to create spaces for discussing how we might work together as a community to decolonize sense of place on campus, while underscoring the value of student-led teaching and learning models within our classrooms.